INTRODUCTION TO NIBRS

Chief of Police

HISTORY

Since its inception in 1930, the Uniform Crime Reporting program has presented Summary-based totals for the main Index Crimes (i.e., murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, motor vehicle theft, and larceny-theft). Arson and human trafficking were added to this list more recently. While the program has shifted to the more-detailed NIBRS reporting methodology, summarized totals are still used for several reasons: (1) ease of comparison to historical data and the FBI's Crime Data Explorer (CDE), (2) to allow a consistent representation of crime data across the states, as nationwide adoption of NIBRS reporting data is still relatively low, and (3) provide a quick view of Crimes Against Persons and Property.¹

The Texas UCR Program serves as the state repository for the collection of crime statistics. The Program's primary objective is to generate reliable information for law enforcement administration, operation, and management. As the Program has evolved and the demand for transparency has increased, so has the demand for the data compiled under this Program. Policy makers and members of the public, including the media and academia, rely upon this data for information on the fluctuations in the level of crime from year to year in their communities and throughout the state.

The Department makes every effort to ensure accuracy in reporting by providing training and quality control checks on the data to confirm the validity of the data it receives from the more than 1,000 agencies contributing to the Program. The accuracy of the statistics depends primarily on each contributor's adherence to established reporting standards; therefore, it is the responsibility of each contributor to submit accurate data and subsequently correct any data submitted in error. It is important to note that participation in the program by law enforcement agencies is voluntary.

Reporting is Now Mandated by Texas Legislature

The 88th Regular Legislative Session (2023) passed HB 4879, amending Sec. 411.054 of the Texas Government Code. The legislation now mandates local law enforcement agencies to implement an incident-based reporting system and use it to report data and statistics to the UCR program. These measures aim to improve the timeliness of reporting and enhance the accuracy of incident-based data. TXDPS will promulgate rules specifying the methods, form, and submission timelines for incident-based data.²

The Mission Police Department Participates in the FBI National Incident Based Reporting System since 2021.
